

Pending Document for Login

Pre-Login Document Verification Stage — Knowledge Base Reference Document for Retrieval-Augmented Generation (RAG) Ingestion

Document purpose: This knowledge document is written to be consumed by a Retrieval-Augmented Generation (RAG) pipeline. Content is organized into short, self-contained sections and paragraphs so that each concept, document type, or process step can be independently tokenized, vectorized, embedded, and retrieved without losing meaning when separated from surrounding text. This document is a continuation of the pre-login sales journey knowledge base and should be read together with the earlier knowledge base document describing the stages that precede this one, including Reference Details.

1. Stage Overview

The stage named Pending Document for Login is the pre-login document verification stage within the pre-login sales journey. In the sequence of the pre-login journey, this stage is preceded by the Reference Details stage, in which the applicant's personal and professional references are captured. The Pending Document for Login stage is the final stage of the pre-login journey. Once this stage is completed, the case is considered ready to move out of the pre-login sales journey and into the login and underwriting workflow. The Pending Document for Login stage exists to ensure that no application is allowed to proceed to login without first collecting and verifying the complete set of mandatory documents required for the applicant and, where applicable, the co-applicant. The stage name itself reflects its function: it represents documents that are pending collection or verification before the case can be logged in. A case cannot move forward to the login stage while any mandatory document required at this stage remains missing, rejected, or unverified. This stage is used to collect all mandatory and optional documents required for applicant identity verification, address verification, ownership validation, financial assessment, and loan application processing. At this stage, the user (typically a Business Development Executive, referred to as the BDE) selects a document category, chooses the appropriate document type within that category, and uploads the corresponding physical or digital document on behalf of the applicant or co-applicant.

1.1 Position in the Pre-Login / Sales Journey

The pre-login / sales journey, as far as this stage is concerned, follows this order: the journey progresses through earlier data-capture stages, arrives at the Reference Details stage where the applicant's references are recorded, and then arrives at the Pending Document for Login stage. The Pending Document for Login stage is the last stage in the pre-login journey, meaning it is the final checkpoint before the application formally enters the login process. Because it is the last stage, it also carries the responsibility of ensuring completeness — every mandatory document across every applicant and co-applicant type must be uploaded and, where required, verified and signed, before the journey can be considered complete.

2. Document Collection Structure

Documents at this stage are organized into categories. Each category represents a purpose that the document set must satisfy, such as proving an address, proving an identity, proving ownership of a property, capturing the application itself, assessing financial capability, or providing a bureau credit report. Within each category, the user is presented with a list of acceptable document types, and the user selects the specific type of document being uploaded before performing the upload action.

Documents are further separated by the party they belong to: the primary Applicant, an Individual Co-Applicant, or an Entity Co-Applicant. Each of these parties has its own distinct set of mandatory and optional document requirements, described in the sections below.

3. Applicant Documents

The Applicant is the primary individual applying for the loan or financial product. The applicant is required to upload documents across six mandatory categories — POA-OVD, POI, Ownership Proof, Application, Financials, and Bureau — in addition to any optional documents that may be relevant to the applicant's specific case.

3.1 Mandatory Category: POA-OVD (Proof of Address - Officially Valid Document)

The POA-OVD category exists to verify the applicant's residential address using a document that is classified as an Officially Valid Document, a term used in KYC (Know Your Customer) regulation to denote a document issued by a government or otherwise recognized authority that is accepted as valid proof of address. The purpose of this category is specifically to verify where the applicant currently resides, which is a regulatory and risk requirement for onboarding a loan applicant. The available document types under POA-OVD are described individually below:

Aadhaar Card: A twelve-digit unique identity number issued by the Government of India's Unique Identification Authority of India (UIDAI) to residents of India. The Aadhaar Card carries the holder's name, photograph, address, and demographic details, and is one of the most commonly used Officially Valid Documents for proof of address in India.

Passport: A government-issued travel document that certifies the identity and nationality of its holder. A passport carries the holder's photograph, name, date of birth, and residential address (on the address page or an attached annexure in the Indian passport format), making it acceptable as a Proof of Address document.

Letter Issued by NPR (National Population Register): An official letter or communication issued under the National Population Register, a register of usual residents maintained by the Government of India. This letter can be used to establish the applicant's residential address when other primary OVD documents are not available.

Voter ID Card: Also known as the Electoral Photo Identity Card (EPIC), this is a photo identity document issued by the Election Commission of India to eligible voters. It carries the holder's name, photograph, and registered address, and is accepted as a Proof of Address document.

Job Card issued under NREGA: A job card issued to a registered worker under the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Act (MGNREGA / NREGA) scheme. The job card records the worker's details including their address and is accepted as an Officially Valid Document for rural applicants.

Driving License: A license issued by a Regional Transport Authority (or equivalent licensing authority) that authorizes the holder to operate a motor vehicle. The driving license carries the holder's photograph, name, and address, and is accepted as a Proof of Address document.

Sale Deed of Property: A legal document that records the transfer of ownership of an immovable property from a seller to a buyer. When the applicant is the owner of the residential property mentioned in the deed, this document can serve as proof of the applicant's address in addition to being used as an ownership document elsewhere in the process.

Rent Agreement: A legal contract between a landlord and a tenant that specifies the terms of occupancy of a rented residential property, including the address of the property, the tenant's name, and the duration of the tenancy. This is used as proof of address when the applicant resides at a rented premises rather than an owned one.

3.2 Mandatory Category: POI (Proof of Identity)

The POI category exists to verify the applicant's identity, independently of their address. This category confirms that the person applying is who they claim to be, using a document that carries a unique identifying number or reference tied to that individual.

PAN Card: The Permanent Account Number (PAN) card is a ten-character alphanumeric identifier issued by the Income Tax Department of India. It is used to track financial transactions and is one of the primary documents used to establish an applicant's identity for financial and lending purposes.

Form 60: A declaration form used by individuals who do not possess a PAN card but who need to enter into a specified financial transaction that would otherwise require one. Form 60 captures the applicant's identity details and is accepted as an alternative to the PAN card in such cases.

3.3 Mandatory Category: Ownership Proof

The Ownership Proof category exists to establish that the applicant owns the residential property or the collateral property being referred to in the loan application. This category is particularly relevant where the loan is secured against property, or where the applicant's declared residence needs to be validated as self-owned rather than rented.

Index II: An extract from the Sub-Registrar's office (used in several Indian states, notably Maharashtra) that records the registration details of a property transaction, including the parties involved, the property description, and the consideration amount. Index II serves as a government-recorded proof of a registered property transaction and is used to establish ownership.

Property Sale Deed: The primary legal instrument that records the sale and transfer of ownership of an immovable property. As an ownership document, it establishes the applicant as the legal owner of the property described within it.

Property Tax Receipt: A receipt issued by the local municipal or civic authority acknowledging payment of property tax by the person assessed as the owner or occupant of the property. This receipt is used as supporting evidence of ownership and continued possession of the property.

Municipal Tax Receipt: A receipt issued by the municipal corporation for taxes levied on a property, similar in function to the Property Tax Receipt, used to corroborate the applicant's ownership or occupancy of the property under that municipal jurisdiction.

Utility Bill: A bill issued by a utility service provider, such as an electricity, water, or gas provider, addressed to the applicant at the property address. While primarily a service bill, it is commonly accepted as supporting evidence linking the applicant's name to a specific property address.

3.4 Mandatory Category: Application

The Application category exists to capture the loan application submitted by the applicant. This is the document that formally records the applicant's request for the loan product, along with the details furnished by the applicant during the application process.

Application Form: The structured form, filled and signed by the applicant, that constitutes the formal request for the loan or financial product. The Application Form captures the applicant's declared details and, at a later point in this stage, is the specific document that is sent for virtual signature by the authorized signatory, as described in Section 6 of this document.

3.5 Mandatory Category: Financials

The Financials category exists to assess the applicant's income and repayment capability. Documents in this category allow the lender to evaluate whether the applicant has sufficient and stable income to service the loan being applied for.

Salary Slip: A document issued by an employer to a salaried employee that details the employee's earnings for a given pay period, including gross pay, deductions, and net pay. The salary slip is used to assess the applicant's income level and repayment capacity as part of the financial evaluation of the loan application.

3.6 Mandatory Category: Bureau

The Bureau category exists to verify the applicant's credit history and credit score. Unlike the other categories, the document in this category is not uploaded by the user; it is generated by the system based on a query made to a credit bureau.

Consumer Bureau Report: A system-generated report retrieved from a credit information company (credit bureau) that details the applicant's credit history, existing credit obligations, repayment track record, and credit score. Because this document is system generated, it does not require a manual upload by the user in the same way as the other mandatory categories, but it forms part of the mandatory document set that must be present before the case can proceed.

3.7 Optional Document Upload (Applicant)

In addition to the mandatory categories described above, the user can upload additional supporting documents for the applicant by selecting the appropriate subcategory and document type. These optional documents are not required to proceed to login but may be uploaded to strengthen or support the case, or to satisfy conditions specific to an individual applicant's profile.

Age Proof: A document that establishes the applicant's date of birth or age, used in cases where age needs to be independently corroborated beyond what is stated on the primary identity or address documents.

Relationship Proof: A document that establishes a familial or legal relationship between the applicant and another individual, such as a co-applicant or guarantor, relevant in cases where the relationship itself affects eligibility or risk assessment.

Declarations: Signed statements made by the applicant declaring specific facts relevant to the application, used where a formal written declaration is needed to record the applicant's assertion on a particular point.

Affidavits: Sworn written statements made by the applicant, typically notarized, used to formally attest to facts that support or clarify aspects of the application.

Deemed OVD - Relative: A document category used when an Officially Valid Document belonging to a relative of the applicant is submitted in support of the applicant's case, under provisions that allow such documents to be deemed acceptable in specific circumstances.

Deemed OVD - Owner: A document category used when an Officially Valid Document belonging to the owner of the property (where the owner is not the applicant) is submitted, deemed acceptable under specific circumstances relevant to the case.

Deemed OVD: A general category for Officially Valid Documents that are accepted under deeming provisions rather than as a primary OVD, used where the standard OVD categories do not directly apply.

Signature Verification: A document or record used to verify and match the applicant's signature against a specimen signature, relevant for confirming the authenticity of the applicant's signature on other submitted documents.

Self Employment: Documents relevant to applicants who are self-employed, used to establish the nature, continuity, and legitimacy of the applicant's self-employed business or profession.

Educational Qualification: Documents such as degree certificates or mark sheets that establish the applicant's educational qualification, relevant in cases where qualification is a factor in eligibility or profiling.

Signing Kit: A set of documents or forms associated with the applicant's signing process, used to support or record the physical or digital signing activity undertaken by the applicant.

Application: Additional application-related documents beyond the primary Application Form, uploaded where supplementary application records are relevant to the case.

Financials: Additional financial documents beyond the mandatory Salary Slip, such as bank statements or income tax returns, uploaded to further support the assessment of the applicant's financial standing.

Practice Registration Certificate: A certificate evidencing that the applicant is registered to practice a profession (such as with a professional council or regulatory body), relevant for applicants belonging to a registered or licensed profession.

4. Co-Applclicant Documents

A co-applclicant is an additional party to the loan application who shares responsibility for the loan alongside the primary applicant. The document requirements for a co-applclicant depend on whether the co-applclicant is an individual person or a legal entity, such as a company or firm. These two co-applclicant types are described separately below.

4.1 Individual Co-Applclicant

For an individual co-applclicant, the document requirements largely mirror those of the primary applicant, since an individual co-applclicant is, like the applicant, a natural person whose identity, address, ownership standing, and application need to be verified. However, the individual co-applclicant's mandatory document set differs from the applicant's in one respect: the Financials category, specifically the Salary Slip, is not required for the individual co-applclicant.

The mandatory documents for an individual co-applclicant are: POA-OVD (verifying the co-applclicant's residential address, using the same document types described in Section 3.1), POI (verifying the co-applclicant's identity, using the same document types described in Section 3.2), Ownership Proof (establishing the co-applclicant's ownership standing where relevant, using the same document types described in Section 3.3), Application (the application-related document associated with the co-applclicant, as described in Section 3.4), and Bureau (the co-applclicant's system-generated Consumer Bureau Report, as described in Section 3.6). Financials (Salary Slip) is explicitly not required for the individual co-applclicant. This distinguishes the individual co-applclicant document set from the applicant document set, where the Salary Slip is mandatory.

4.2 Entity Co-Applclicant

An entity co-applclicant is a co-applclicant that is a legal entity rather than a natural person, such as a company, partnership firm, or other registered business entity. Because an entity does not have a personal identity or residence in the way an individual does, the document categories and the document types accepted within them differ from those used for individual applicants and co-applclicants.

4.2.1 Mandatory Category: POA (Proof of Address) for Entity

The POA category for an entity co-applclicant exists to verify the registered address of the entity, meaning the official address at which the business or company is registered or operates.

Form INC-22 (Companies): A statutory form filed with the Registrar of Companies under the Companies Act to notify or confirm the registered office address of a company. It serves as an official record of the company's registered address.

Telephone Bill: A billing statement issued by a telecommunications service provider for landline telephone services, addressed to the entity at its business premises, used to corroborate the entity's operational address.

Postpaid Mobile Bill: A billing statement for a postpaid mobile connection registered in the name of the entity, addressed to the entity's premises, used as supporting proof of address.

Bank Statement: A statement issued by a bank for the entity's bank account, showing the entity's registered address along with transaction history, used here specifically as a proof-of-address document for the entity.

Utility Bill: A bill for a utility service, such as electricity or water, issued in the entity's name at its business premises, used to establish the entity's operational address.

Municipal Tax Receipt: A receipt issued by the municipal authority for property tax paid on the entity's business premises, used to corroborate the entity's address.

Shop & Establishment Certificate: A certificate issued under the applicable state Shops and Establishments Act, registering the entity's place of business and confirming its operational address and legal standing to operate at that location.

GST Registration Certificate: A certificate issued under the Goods and Services Tax (GST) regime, confirming the entity's registration for GST purposes and recording its registered place of business.

Registered Rent Agreement: A rent agreement between the entity (as tenant) and a landlord for the business premises, which has been formally registered with the relevant registration authority, used as a stronger form of address proof than an unregistered agreement.

Sale Deed of Property: A legal document recording the entity's purchase and ownership of the business premises, used here to establish the entity's registered address where the premises are owned rather than rented.

Title Document of Shop: A document establishing legal title to a shop or commercial premises occupied by the entity, used to support the entity's claim to the address at which it operates.

Index II: As described in Section 3.3, an extract from the Sub-Registrar's office recording a registered property transaction; used here to support the entity's address where the underlying property transaction pertains to the entity's business premises.

Rent Agreement: An unregistered rent agreement between the entity and a landlord for the business premises, used as address proof where a registered agreement is not available.

4.2.2 Mandatory Category: POI (Proof of Identity) for Entity

The POI category for an entity co-applicant exists to verify the legal identity of the entity itself, as distinct from the identity of any individual associated with it.

PAN Card: In the context of an entity, the PAN card refers to the Permanent Account Number issued to the entity (company, firm, or other registered organization) by the Income Tax Department. It uniquely identifies the entity for tax and financial purposes and serves as the entity's primary proof of identity in this stage.

4.2.3 Mandatory Category: Ownership Proof for Entity

The Ownership Proof category for an entity co-applicant exists to establish ownership or occupancy of the business premises used by the entity.

Utility Bill: As described above under the entity POA category, a utility bill addressed to the entity is also used here to support the entity's claim to occupancy of the business premises.

Property Sale Deed: The legal deed recording the entity's purchase of the business premises, used here specifically to establish ownership of the property rather than merely the entity's address.

Property Tax Receipt: A receipt for property tax paid on the business premises, used to corroborate the entity's ownership or occupancy standing.

Municipal Tax Receipt: A receipt issued by the municipal authority for taxes on the business premises, used similarly to corroborate ownership or occupancy.

Index II: The Sub-Registrar's extract described earlier, used here to confirm the registered transaction through which the entity acquired the property.

4.2.4 Optional Documents for Entity Co-Applicant

The following optional document categories can be uploaded for an entity co-applicant, in addition to the mandatory categories described above: Ownership Proof (additional ownership-related documents beyond the mandatory set), Bureau (a credit bureau report relevant to the entity, where applicable), and Financials (additional financial documents relevant to assessing the entity's financial standing, such as business financial statements).

5. Actions Available on Each Document Row

For each document row presented at this stage, a defined set of actions is available to the user. These actions govern how a document, once associated with a document type, is managed through its lifecycle at this stage.

Upload: The Upload action allows the user to attach the selected document file against the chosen document category and document type. This is the primary action used to satisfy a mandatory or optional document requirement, and it is generally the first action performed on a given document row.

Download: The Download action allows the user to retrieve a previously uploaded document, where available, so that it can be viewed or verified outside the upload interface itself. This action is available once a document has already been uploaded against a row.

Replace/Re-upload: The Replace or Re-upload action allows the user to update an existing document by uploading a new version in place of the one previously submitted. This is used when the originally uploaded document was incorrect, illegible, expired, or otherwise needed correction, without requiring the document row itself to be recreated.

Delete: The Delete action allows the user to remove an uploaded document from a document row. This action is subject to permissions and validation rules, meaning it may not always be available depending on the state of the document, the stage of the case, or the role of the user attempting the deletion. Collectively, these actions ensure that the document collection process at this stage is not a one-way, single-attempt submission, but a manageable process in which documents can be corrected, refreshed, or withdrawn as needed before the case is ready to proceed to login. This screen ensures that all mandatory KYC, ownership, application, bureau, and financial documents are collected before the loan application proceeds to the login and underwriting stages.

6. Post-Upload Verification and Virtual Signing of the

Application Form

Once the respective applicant or co-applicant has uploaded their documents at this stage, the uploaded document set does not automatically conclude the stage. A verification and signing step follows, specifically in relation to the Application Form document described in Section 3.4.

6.1 BDE-Initiated Verification

After the document upload is completed, the BDE (Business Development Executive) — the field or channel user responsible for handling the case at this stage — initiates a verification step for the Application Form. This step is completed virtually, through a dedicated document signing and verification gateway that is integrated into the application flow for this purpose. Such a gateway is a purpose-built digital signing and verification platform that allows a document to be presented to a designated signatory for review and electronic signature, with the signing event recorded and the signed document returned to the originating application in a verifiable form. This type of gateway is a standard component in digital loan origination and sales journeys wherever a physical, in-person signature is being replaced by a remote, digitally verifiable signing action.

6.2 Authorized Signatory Flow

As part of this verification and signing step, the authorized signatory for the case receives a link that opens a document viewing interface. Within this interface, the authorized signatory is able to view the Application Form along with the applicant's uploaded documents, allowing the documents to be reviewed and verified before the signing action is taken. Once the authorized signatory has reviewed and is satisfied with the documents presented, they proceed to sign the Application Form virtually, through the same interface. It is the Application Form specifically — not the full set of applicant and co-applicant documents — that is the document being virtually signed at this step. The other uploaded documents (POA-OVD, POI, Ownership Proof, Financials, and the Bureau report) are presented for the authorized signatory's review and verification within the same viewing interface, but the signing action itself is applied to the Application Form.

6.3 Purpose of the Verification and Signing Step

This step exists to ensure that the Application Form, which represents the formal loan request, is not only collected as a document but is also independently reviewed and authorized by a designated signatory before the case is allowed to proceed. By requiring the authorized signatory to view the supporting documents alongside the Application Form, the process ties the act of signing to a documented review of the evidence underlying the application, rather than treating the signature as a standalone formality. Only once this verification and virtual signing step is completed does the Pending Document for Login stage move toward completion, allowing the case to proceed from the pre-login sales journey into the login stage.

7. Stage Completion and Transition to Login

The Pending Document for Login stage is considered complete when: all mandatory documents for the applicant (POA-OVD, POI, Ownership Proof, Application, Financials, and Bureau) have been uploaded; all mandatory documents for any individual co-applicant (POA-OVD, POI, Ownership Proof, Application, and Bureau) have been uploaded; all mandatory documents for any entity co-applicant (POA, POI, and Ownership Proof) have been uploaded; and the Application Form has been reviewed and virtually signed by the authorized signatory following the BDE-initiated verification step described in Section 6.

Once these conditions are satisfied, the case exits the Pending Document for Login stage, which is the final stage of the pre-login sales journey, and proceeds into the login stage, from which it enters underwriting and further processing outside the scope of the pre-login journey.
